Prophet's Rock Infusion 'chilled' Pinot Noir

Reviews

2016 Vintage

Winemaker Paul Pujol worked several vintages in France where frisky, lighter styles of red (think beaujolais, Bordeaux claret) are part of the winescape. With this Central Otago-grown wine he successfully recreates that effect. Limited skin contact, a wild ferment and no secondary fermentation has resulted in an intense, red cherry-laced wine that lights up the mouth with its fresh acidity and brightness. Pujol reckons it may be the best pizza wine he's ever made.

Prophet's Rock "Infusion" Pinot Noir 2016 is a beautiful New Zealand version of a good Beaujolais, a fresh, zingy, drink young style that is best served lightly chilled. The lack of contact with the skins has removed the majority of tannins from this wine, making it a vibrant yet elegant wine – a real crowd pleaser.
